At the moment Sololo would still seem immune to coronavirus.

The conditional is mandatory because, even if the government has placed health checkpoints at about 350 km in the south and 100 in the north, it is known that the share of asymptomatic carriers is at least 60 percent.

My opinion is that Solol will soon be caught by the virus. Carried both by those who, apparently healthy and therefore able to pass the controls, will flee from Nairobi ... and by the nomadic shepherds who cover long distances. Furthermore, we must not forget both the uncontrolled passages with Ethiopia and Somalia by guerrillas and marauders and the presence of soldiers to counter them.

Upon the arrival of the virus, a real disaster can occur, unimaginable as instead creating an "immunity of flock" without excessive losses.

We are explaining in every way how to respect hygiene and to isolate ourselves ... and we are trying to accumulate food as we foresee the lack and growth of prices ... which would create the conditions for assaults and social violence.

Our economic ability to cope is increasingly lacking.
